Signs... what are they really? Are they Symbols, are they Colours, or are they Stars?... Where are they written anyway? And will I understand them when I see them? Maybe they are just signals: Turn left, turn right, it's green now, go ahead, now! Sorry it was red... stop! Walk now!... geez... that was close!

And when we see them, what do we do? Is it time to go now? Should I make a move? Am I moving too fast, am I going to slow? Do I have to fight? Is it time to run away? Maybe it'd be reasonable to stay and fight back, do something "against" it, try to "stop" it or "change" it in any way... mmh...

Perhaps I should do nothing until I am absolute certain, until I get at least more information. Or I'll wait until somebody tells me otherwise. Yes that's right, usually people have a sense for these things – all I have to do is just follow the crowd. They can't all be wrong can they? I mean, where are they all going anyway? Perhaps I should ask one of them. Oh God, they look so sure, look at their eyes! Oh well, on second thoughts...

Maybe I just wait a little while for another Sign... maybe I just wait until you come by have a look at them and tell me some about it... how about that?

Well, I see you then...
